Appeals For More
Jewish Chaplains

SPECIAL NEW YORK — Citing the increasing number of Jewish men enlisting in the armed forces of the nation and the consequent need for a greater number of Jewish chaplains in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, leaders of all national rabbinical bodies, Jewish congregational organizations and theological seminaries today issued a joint call to Jewish congregations to grant leave of absence for the duration of the war to rabbis who can qualify for commissions as chaplains under the regulations of the War and Navy departments.

The call was made public by Frank L. Weil, president of the National Jewish Welfare Board, which represents the Jewish community in religious matters in connection with the army and navy. Jewish candidates for chaplaincy commissions, in accordance with the regulations of the War and Navy Departments, must receive the ecclesiastical endorsement of the Board's Committee on Chaplains.

PORTABLE SYNAGOGUES
GO INTO USE IN BRITAIN

SPECIAL LONDON — War-time Britain will see an innovation in Jewish religious life — portable synagogues.

The National Council for Jewish Religious Education announces that it already has government approval for its scheme to provide the larger Jewish evacuation centers with portable buildings which will serve as synagogues, kosher canteens and social halls, facilitating Jewish communal life in many areas.

When people from vulnerable industrial and traffic centers were evacuated into relatively safer districts, Anglo-Jewish religious life was, to a large degree, disrupted. The National Council for Jewish Religious Education immediately began planning readjustments. The scheme for portable buildings is part of this design. In many of the evacuation areas there are no suitable premises for communal activities and that has hindered the work hitherto. It is hoped that the portable buildings will relieve the situation.

J.W.B., B'nai B'rith
Rabbinical Groups
And Hadassah Act

By Jewish Telegraph Agency

WASHINGTON—Declaration of war against the United States by Japan, Germany and Italy brought forth immediate pledges of intensified cooperation and support from numerous Jewish organizations in the country.

The Jewish Welfare Board, the Jewish organization in closest contact with our armed forces, sent a message to the President offering its "complete facilities and entire resources."

The B'nai B'rith informed President Roosevelt that it "stands ready for any and all sacrifices of blood, money, talent and toil in defense of our country." It was announced here that B'nai B'rith has contributed $5,000 from its national funds to the American Red Cross' $50,000,000 United States war relief fund for civilian aid and services to the armed forces. An additional $45,000 was pledged by B'nai B'rith units throughout the country.

Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America and Junior Hadassah, its youth group, informed President Roosevelt by wire that its 100,000 members have been asked to give "all-out aid to America" by registering en masse for local civilian defense work on Monday, Dec. 22.

The Agudas Israel, speaking on behalf of orthodox Jews, wired the White House that orthodox Jewry "stands united under your leadership in this decisive hour for our country as for the entire democratic world. We are certain that with the help of the Almighty this crisis will lead to victory over the dark powers enlisted by our enemies."

The Union of American Hebrew Congregations, comprising over three hundred congregations, pledged its full support in the present crisis. "We shall work and pray for victory; may God grant you health and strength to lead us forward," its message to the President declared.

The Rabbinical Assembly of America also sent a message pledging the fullest measure of support.

Jewish Recruits Answer Axis Defy to America

By BEN SAMUEL

(c) 1941, Jewish Telegraphic Agency

THE DAY that Germany and Italy declared war on the United States, I went down to the Army Recruiting Station in New York. I went there for one purpose—to see for myself how Jewish men were going to react to Hitler's declaration of war.

This is what I found.

Uppermost in the mind of every man, both Christian and Jew, was the Japanese attack on Hawaii. When these men found out that Hitler and Mussolini had also declared war, they merely added the names of the brown and black dictators to the scorned names of the Japanese warlords.

I found Carl Abrams sitting in the second floor assembly hall of the Army Recruiting Station. In that same hall were young boys of eighteen and middle-aged men of forty. Some were dressed in their working togs and others wore sweaters and mackinaws. They were office boys, day laborers, bus drivers, truckmen, refugees, war veterans, lawyers, salesmen, and students. Carl sat quietly in his seat holding a white tag. "See this tag," he said, "that's my answer to the axis." The white tag signified that he was enlisting as an aviation cadet. Scores of others also held white tags. Carl looked up and twirled his tag in his fingers. "I'm gonna be a flier," he said, "a pilot."

Carl, who is twenty-two years of age and lives with his parents in the Bronx, said that most of his friends were doing the same thing. "They're enlisting the same as me," he said. "It's the only thing to do, the only thing," he emphasized. "When I heard on the radio that Germany and Italy had ganged up on us, well, I just double time it downtown to sign up. But what really made up my mind was Japan. What they did to Hawaii got me plenty sore," he went on, "and when I heard that Hitler and Mussolini, were in on the deal too, that clinched it. I wanted to be an actor," Carl said reminiscingly, "but from now on I want to be a good soldier, a good flier."

Sitting several seats away from Carl was a young boy in a green mackinaw. A thick shock of black hair topped his young tanned face. "I'm Philip Glassman," he said. "I'm a C. C. C. boy." At the moment he was listening to the Recruiting Sergeant.

"Keep on your toes and have a helluva good time in between," the sergeant was saying. "Play hard and play clean and have some fun because tomorrow may be 24 hours long." Philip smiled. "It's the only way," he said, pointing to the sergeant.

Philip told me why he was enlisting. "When I heard about that attack on Hawaii, me and a bunch of others went to our commanding officer up at Deansboro, New York, and said could we have a crack at signing up in the army. Our C. O. said 'okay, boys, go ahead.' Last night I pulled into New York but I got here too late to sign up," Philip related. "When I got down here this morning, some one said to me Germany and Italy have declared war on us. But that's nothing to what we're going to do to them," Philip went on. "Yes sir, we'll fix 'em good."

One hour later Philip was down stairs looking very glum. "Boy, am I mad," he said. "I'm mad as hell." He told me how the Army Recruiting Officers had rejected him. "They say I'm too young," Philip said morosely. "I'm not eighteen yet. I'll be eighteen years old in three weeks. But I said to this Recruiting Officer, 'give me a break, it's only three weeks to

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

STOCKHOLM—More than 1,000 victims of spotted fever in the densely crowded Warsaw ghetto have been put to death by gas in a new move by Nazi military authorities to check the epidemic of this disease, which has spread throughout the eastern front area and is taking a heavy toll of German troops, it is learned this week from reliable sources. A 132-page memorial volume entitled "Mr. Justice Brandeis: Great American—Press Opinion and Public Appraisal", which contains articles, editorials and columns from over 100 daily newspapers and many weekly religious, professional and labor publications throughout the country on the late Justice Louis D. Brandeis was published in St. Louis this week under the sponsorship of the Louis D. Brandeis B'nai B'rith Lodge. Edward M. M. Warburg was reelected chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee this week at the 27th annual meeting of the organization. Mrs. Felix M. Warburg and Paul Baerwald were also chosen to serve another term as honorary chairmen. A strong denunciation of the treatment of Dutch Jews by the Nazi occupation authorities is contained in a pastoral letter issued by the Dutch Reformed Church at the end of September, the text of which just reached London this week. The spread of the war in the Far East has led to a renewal of talks between the British government and a group of interested parliamentarians regarding the formation of a Jewish army, it is reported in London this week. Col. Josiah Wedgwood, Laborite M.P. and a staunch fighter for Palestine and Jewish causes in the house of Commons, was this week elevated to a peerage. He was made a Baron and will sit in the House of Lords in the future.

Arnovich Will Be Top Notcher With Indians, Weiner Declares

By MORRIS WEINER

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

NEW YORK—Here is good news for the fans of Handsome Harry Danning. Harry is to be retained by the New York Giants as their first string catcher and is to be reunited with his old pal, Hank Lieber who has been repurchased by the machinations of the Giants' recently appointed manager—Mel Ott. Mel's first statement to the press after being signed to a contract was a terse one: "I'm happy. Who wouldn't be? But get this straight—Hank Danning stays with my ball club."

Harry the Horse was slated to go if Bill Terry had remained as pilot. There was bad blood between the two and Danning's pathetic work at the plate last season clinched the rumors that the Jewish backstop would have his skids greased to another big league town.

Another Hebrew big-timer in the baseball limelight is Morrie Arnovich who has been sold down the river to the Indianapolis club in the American Association. Morrie had his last chance to make good with the Giants last season but was able to hit a miserable .250 average for the year. It's our guess that he'll be a top-notch in the minors and that he'll still earn another chance at the big time. The Superior, Wisconsin laddie is far from being through in the majors. Arnovich has had a rather spectacular career in his short life in the majors. He came up from the Three Eye circuit and was signed to a full term contract with the Phillies of the National League.

In his first year in the majors he was a sensational clouter and banged the apple at a terrific pace of .350 for most of the season. He was the first rookie ever to be given a "Day" in his first year "up" and the many thousands of baseball fans in Philadelphia joined the B'nai B'rith Organization who sponsored the occasion in really making it something to write home about. The next year Morrie played with the National League All-Stars—rather he was selected to play but was kept on the dugout bench. Then he was sold to the Cincy Reds and was tried out as a utility outfielder but he could not find again that batting eye that had made him so deadly a hitter in the Quaker Town. He was with the Cincy club for two seasons and then during the winter trades of 1940-1941 was sold to the Giants who were in dire need of a good slugging outfielder. But after much trouble and todo with the draft board and deferments and other red tape, Morrie did not hit the comeback trail last season.

Ergo—a quick trip to the minors. Maybe he'll be one guy to come back. We hope so!

Molly Litvak pulled a fast one a few weeks ago when she and her fiancé became one, away ahead of schedule, after a shower given for her in honor of her impending marriage.

Molly was to be married the 28th of this month.....Girls have been virtually "wearing the pants" for a long time, and now we find that it is no longer virtual, but literally so. Proof are the Little Boys' pants being featured at Schamburg's Dress Shop which are exact replica of the masculine editions.

THE ROMANTIC CYCLE

About one hundred guests gazed breathlessly at the vision which was Edna Schultz as the orchestra played "Because" and then emitted a long sigh as the song ended and Edna proceeded down the aisle to the tune of "Here Comes the Bride." The wedding, which took place in Terre Haute was a particularly lovely one, and friends and relatives from many states gathered to enjoy the ceremony, dinner and dancing. Irv Long, Bud Greenberg, Dar Wood and wife, and many others arrived from Chicago; Lily Mae Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Sicanoff, Miriam, Walt and Paul Sicanoff, Loretta Diness and Terry Fisher of I. U., Bert Cohen (off to Akron this week), Mr. Feibleman, represented Indianapolis, and in the large bridal party Blanche Smith and Blanche Schultz were two especially lovely bridesmaids. Adolph Hecht of I. U. might have been the groom for all his nervousness in the procession, but Hy Schultz, brother of the bride, thought it quite a lark — and enjoyed every minute of it. Mr. Feibleman made a very impressive speech and toast to the newlyweds. Terry Fisher, incidentally, was recently given a Z. B. T. pin while visiting an officer in an Illinois army camp. Paul Sicanoff danced alternately with a cutie from Evansville by the name of Lieberman, and his father. And through all the festivities flowed plenty of champagne. The bridal couple fortunately were allowed to slip away quietly to begin their honeymoon in Florida.

Sunday was indeed the day for wedding nuptials for there were no less than three—Evelyn Goldsmith's and Miriam Forman being the other two Mrs.

U.S. Judaism Called Anemic By Frisch; Palestine Praised

Special
NEW YORK — Describing the present state of Judaism in the Western World as "anemic", Daniel Frisch, of Indianapolis, a member of the National Executive of the Zionist Organization of America, this week declared in a release sent out by national Zionist offices that Palestine "looms not only as the Jewish commonwealth in which large multitudes of Jews will reestablish themselves and live as a free and unhampered people, but as a spring of perpetual life radiating inspiration and strength to the communities outside of its boundaries."

The statement points out that the task of "preparing our demands to be presented at the peace conference will be the responsibility of the Zionist Organization" and declares that the fulfillment of these demands will be determined by the pressure behind them. Calling it an "unforgivable sin" to be outside the organized ranks of the Zionist movement, Mr. Frisch declared that it is not "a duty but a privilege" to be a Zionist.

The statement concludes: "The war has destroyed the last traces of Jewish life in Europe. Despite their declining force, the Jewish communities in Central and Eastern Europe represented the last refuge of Judaism in the Dispersion. These communities still supplied such vitality as they could spare to the celebration Jan. 30 and of the local campaign against infantile paralysis beginning Jan. 12."

attenuated and almost atrophied Judaism of the Western World. With the destruction of these communities, Judaism has been rendered more homeless than ever.

"There is no doubt that with the advent of the new era which will emerge out of the victory of the democracies, all of Eastern Europe will be reorganized on the Western system. As time goes on the Judaism of the communities which will arise on the ruins of the old will progressively degenerate into the same anemic state as Judaism in the Western World.

"Palestine, therefore, looms not only as the Jewish commonwealth in which large multitudes of Jews will reestablish themselves and live as a free and unhampered people, but as a spring of perpetual life radiating inspiration and strength to the communities outside of its boundaries.

"That is why to be counted as a member of the Z.O.A. becomes a matter of Jewish dignity; an avenue of fulfilling Jewish responsibility.

Lights of God

AMID CHAOS one likes to comfort himself by trying to put together the snug little world he lived in before it all fell to pieces about his ears. We were sitting around the living room that Sunday afternoon listening to music from the radio. What music this was is now quite forgotten in the hideous crash of cataclysmic events that came rolling down on us like an avalanche. We knew the world hung on the edge of another world crisis but we had become accustomed to the shock of imminent crises; they were like tight shoes to which one in time manages to adjust his feet.

A bearded old man came to the door selling candles for Chanukah. He always brings homilies with his Chanukah candles, to impress upon us the precious spiritual meaning of these lights.

Yes, he said, these lights meant more than ever before, though they are only a quarter a box. The world is so dark but we should thank God we still have these lights left, he thought. He bade me to consider that we had saved these lights through two thousand years and they were still as bright as in the beginning.

"Do you know, Mr. Segal, what these lights mean? They are the sign of the everlasting God and His mercy and His justice and His loving-kindness. Take my word for it, these lights will shine long after Hitler. Nobody can put out these lights of God. Mercy, justice, loving-kindness."

He had scarcely gone when the news came. A startling interruption of the music: "Pearl Harbor has been attacked by Japanese forces." This was incredible; it couldn't be true. Not at this moment when we were negotiating for peace with Japan. Hadn't the President only the day before pleaded for peace with the Emperor of Japan? It couldn't be true that Japan had attacked us at this moment because that would be perfidy. We were still bemused by the fantasy of a world built in the image of our own ideals.

As, under the impact of later news this world crumbled, we were grateful to remember what the old man with the Chanukah candles had said: "Take my word for it, these lights will shine long after Hitler. Nobody can put out these lights of God. Mercy, justice, loving-kindness."

JEWISH RECRUITS ANSWER

my birthday.' But this officer, he said 'I'm sorry young fella, you'll have to wait.' Philip looked down at the ground and kicked at the steps. 'I don't want to wait,' he protested. 'I want to get in the army now. I want to be with my brother.'

Philip went on to tell about his brother. "Bernard's a staff sergeant in the Air Corps," he said proudly. "He's an old timer too. Been in the army for four years. At a time like this, I want to be with him. Me and him could lick the whole so and so darned German Army. The way I feel now, I could lick anything," Philip continued. He went on to tell about his family. He said that his favorite uncle, Louis Goldberg of Brooklyn, had volunteered in 1917 and went overseas with Pershing. "My uncle Louis will probably try to sign up also," Philip assured. "And then there's my brother Stanley. He tried to get into the Army last summer but they rejected him on account of his eyes." At this point Philip drew a long breath. "But they won't reject me," he said. "They can't. They just can't do it." He pulled his mackinaw tight around his shoulders and walked upstairs again. He was going to take another "crack" at signing up.

Bernard Zarembowitz is a tall, bespectacled young man of twenty-three. Bernard is a salesman. At least he was. Now he's in the Army of the United States. "I'm in this army because it's the only thing to do," Bernard said. "You can't go about your business as usual when things happen like what happened at Hawaii. When someone sticks a gun in your belly and says lie down, if you've got an ounce of self-respect you'll fight back. You got to," he said pointedly. "Well, all I know is I'm not gonna lie down. Neither is anybody who's my friend." He told me about his only friend. The day before he too had signed up. He was speaking of Bernard Sturmack of 1932 Loring Place, The Bronx. "We'll get together again as soon as I get to camp," Bernard said. "From there on, them babies over there better watch out." Bernard gave his address as 2685 University Avenue, Bronx.

Seymour Wolfe wanted to be a musician. "I was going to enroll in the Juillard School of Music," he said. "But now I'm enrolling in Uncle Sam's Army. For three days I kept thinking about it and then when I heard about Hitler and Mussolini declaring war, I went into action. I realized that if those monkeys got the better of us, there would be no future for America. I'm in this army now to see that all of us have a future."

Seymour pulled something out of his pocket. It was a white tag, the same white tag that Carl Abrams had held. "I'm gonna be in the Air Corps," Seymour said. "From now on, I'm gonna make music in the clouds. Seymour said that he "would make a naturally good pilot. But anything connected with the Air Corps is good enough for me," he explained modestly. "As long as I'm in it. As long as I'm where I can do my bit."

Up to the time he enlisted, Seymour worked in his father's celluloid factory. His parents live at 2360 East 17 Street, Brooklyn, New York.

A thin young man walked into the assembly hall and sat down quietly in a corner. His face was drawn and his lips tapered off in anger. He wouldn't give his name nor would he say why he was enlisting. He said only one thing. "I'm a German refugee," he said. Two hours earlier, Hitler had again declared war on him.

Forego Furloughs
To Give Non-Jews
Christmas At Home

By Jewish Telegraph Agency
NEW YORK — Thousands of Jewish officers and enlisted men on duty with the Army and Navy decided voluntarily not to ask for Christmas furlough in order to make it possible for the maximum number of those of other faiths to be with their families during the holiday.

The offer was made public by Frank L. Weil, president of the National Jewish Welfare Board, in an address to representatives of the organization's eighty affiliate Jewish Centers and Y. M. H. A.'s in the New York metropolitan area at a special regional defense conference at the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

Soldiers, sailors, marines and nurses on duty in more than thirty camps, navy yards, hospitals and elsewhere volunteered to remain on duty on Christmas, so the greater part of their Christmas comrades might spend Christmas Day with their families, Mr. Weil declared. This action on the part of American soldiers of Jewish faith started at Camp Robinson, Little Rock, Ark., where Jewish soldiers submitted to their commanding officer a resolution asking they be permitted to remain on duty, Mr. Weil said.

Rose Offers Used Tires
To meet Emergency

With the sale of new tires restricted to Jan. 4, and then probably placed on a priority basis, Joe Rothbard, president of the Rose Tire Co., 930 N. Meridian St., pointed out this week that the firm has assembled one of the largest stocks of good used tires in its history to meet the present emergency.

These tires have been carefully inspected for safety and mileage and in many cases cannot be distinguished from new as they were in service just a short time. Practically all well-known makes and sizes are available. Since many motorists will be affected by the priority ruling, it is to the advantage of car owners to anticipate their needs and buy as many used tires as their present tire mileage indicates they will require during the coming year, Mr. Rothbard said.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

Death of Hy Ferman
Heavy Loss

To the editor:

I wish to take this means of expressing the sentiments of the B'nai B'rith for the unforgettable contribution rendered to Jewry by Hy Ferman, the late President of the Elkhart Lodge, who passed away during the last few weeks.

Many new Jewish families have come to Indianapolis to prepare for the opening and operation of Lane Bryant's establishment here. They are Messrs. and Mesdames H. Panzer, 55 S. Linwood; H. Begal and daughter Judith, 3140 N. Meridian; Chas. Mintz, 4009 Central. A. Millman, 1414 N. Delaware; Phil Hardy, 1642 Park; Ben Cohen, and children, Howard and Leonore, 4015 Boulevard Place; Mrs. Max Seidman, 2917 Ruckle, Mrs. V. Stone and daughter Sascha, 3140 N. Meridian; and Misses Iris Katz, Esther Devins, Yvette Sachs, Irna Marks, and Minnie Silverstein who are living at the Hotel tee.

The writer was a personal friend of Mr. Ferman, and had occasion frequently to visit the Elkhart lodge, of which he was the guiding spirit. He had given every ounce of energy, even though in a weakened physical condition, for the preservation of B'nai B'rith ideals and the establishment and maintenance of the Elkhart lodge. He was one of its organizers, and spent hours of time away from his business to

Edna Schultz Wed To Irving Tockman In Beautiful Rites

By MRS. MAX L. BERNHEIMER

PEOPLE AND PLACES

New York and now making her home here in Indianapolis, Jack Falk, Carol Kahn and Wife, Sam Sax, Gwenn Rosnak, Mr. and Mrs. Dee, H. T. Cohen, most of the Kroot clan and Ed Cohen. Loads and loads of others made up the huge crowd that watched the initiation of about 100 young men into the organization.

THE WAR INTERVENES

News hinted at in former column has blossomed forth in the formal engagement of Helen Regen and Art Barrett. Art, however, is slated to join Uncle Sam's forces the first of the year so the wedding plans are very indefinite. And Flo Lustgarten said "yes" to dark Phil Fogle. Newly engaged Bob Kroot unexpectedly left his new fiancée last week when he joined the Air Corps and hied off to St. Louis. Also with him were Sol Crash (minus fiancée Micky Peltz), Max Stein and Mike Rubenstein. Max, however, was back in a few days on special detail and stationed at Fort Harrison—lucky fellow. Good luck to the other three—we'll be listening for news of you "flying high."

IN CHICAGO

Chicago two week-ends ago—Mike Glassner danced and romanced aplenty Saturday night at the glamorous A. E. Phi dance. Jeanne Sacks and Bob Cooper found the S. D. T. affair at the Stevens Hotel completely satisfying, and each other completely absorbing. Ed Rose watched the Chicago Bears trounce the Green Bay Packers with eyes on the game and his mind on the following Wednesday which would bring the arrival of his Adele from school. Ruthie Chaplick was just "doin' the town."

ABOUT PEOPLE

Bernie Rose, Meyer Maieron and Harry Einsteadig were three of our lucky lads to draw Camp Lee, Virginia for their training grounds. We saw Bernie in town this week-end, home already on furlough. Bernie made a very fine speech at the Beth-El Chanukah dinner Sunday evening along with Dick Kramer, Senator Weiss and Daniel Frisch. Also at the dinner just glimpsed in the crowd of 300 people, were Mr. and Mrs. Lou Sagalowsky, the entire Maurer clan, the Podkins, Granofsky's, Stolkins, and Dobrowitz. The most enthusiasm was shown for the choir from Cincinnati, which proved very good.

TWO NEWCOMERS AND A DANCE

Two newcomers to Indianapolis are Harry Young of Pittsburgh, and Irving Epstein of Toledo, and they've lost no time in discovering the talents and attractions of the city. Girls, don't forget to keep the night of Dec. 30 open for the big dance being given at the Kirshbaum for soldiers, sailors, and what have you—you should all be present to give these lonesome lads a swell evening to somehow compensate for the faraway families and friends of these boys. You may be sure that you'll have a swell time too, for who wouldn't wish at least four fellas for every girl?

Cincinnati Holds Back $25,000 From National Agencies

Special
CINCINNATI, O.—For the first time in the history of U. S. Jewish Communities, money is being withheld from national Jewish defense agencies in order to bring "pressure upon or encouragement of the Big Four to achieve national unity through the General Jewish Council."

The move was voted last week by the Cincinnati Jewish Community Council when the recommendation of the executive committee to withhold temporarily $25,000 allocated to the Big Four was approved. The $25,000 was raised in the recent Jewish Welfare Fund drive.

Although withholding of funds to the national defense agencies in order to force them to solve their differences and unify their action has been discussed in many communities throughout the nation, the Cincinnati move is the first of its kind and should arouse widespread discussion.

BETH EL

Friday night service will be dedicated to the Jewish-Christian relationship in the world, Rabbi Elias Charry announced. The Rev. Almon J. Coble, pastor of the Brightwood M. E. Church, will share the pulpit and both will talk on the subject "Jews and Christians Today and Tomorrow". A special invitation is extended to non-Jewish members of the community to attend. Oneg Shabbat will follow.

Our Film Folks

By HELEN ZIGMOND

HOLLYWOOD—War hit Hollywood with a bang—all the studios rallied even after a call—the female contingent, wives, daughters and stars, swarmed to join the Women's Emergency Corps. All Japanese employees were let out, but there were very few—and these in the menial capacity of gardeners, janitors, etc. With bars down in government policy, studios are rushing anti-Axis pictures into work. Warners—never caught short—have four anti-Nazi films ready for release. Studios increased their police force. Visitors are barred. Talk of using the huge sound stages for hangars. Siren noises will be deleted from all films to prevent confusion and panic in the audience.

A German film paper demands to know why photos of American stars are still displayed in Reich movie houses when U.S. films are taboo—and proposes that they be instantly relegated to the darkest corner in Germany. At which Newsman Cunningham slyly chirps, "That could be most anyplace!"

Stella Adler returns to the screen in "Shadow of the Thin Man." Two others with featured parts in it are Sam Levene and Lou Lubin.

Winchell surprised the movie moguls by rejecting a thousand-dollar-a-week contract for four pictures a year in which he would have acted as commentator. But he also restricted his newspaper contract to a one-year renewal because he is a lieutenant-commander in the U. S. Naval Reserve and must be available in case of emergency.

Chaplin's "Great Dictator" proved to be a dark horse. Not too enthusiastically greeted by the critics, it has thus far rolled up a gross of two and a half million in this country alone, not counting the frozen funds it piled up in England. Chaplin, far from retiring at this stage of his career, will be more active than ever next year. He will produce three pictures, acting in one.

Closeups: Don't be surprised if Theda Bara returns to shadow acting—she is discussing a part in "I Married an Angel." Irving Berlin donates his profits on "Angels of Mercy" to the American Red Cross. Felix Bressard without his customary lip brush feels a bit denuded. He is clean-shaven for his current assignment, and says, "Now I have to use only my face." Alexander Granach got the role of Rinaldo in "For Whom the Bell Tolls." That's one part the fans won't have to cast.

Hollywood and Higher Learning: Groucho Marx and George Jessel will be the guest lecturers on a course conducted by screenwriter Morrie Ryskind at Columbia University, from whose portals Ryskind was ejected in his student days.

Boris Morros and his co-producer, S. P. Eagle (formerly Spiegel) are seeing stars. They have such a dazzling array lined up for "Tales of Manhattan," they were troubled as to how to arrange the credits. The story is a series of separate incidents, each unit embracing its own group of stars. The producers found a way out via the play program. Billing says, "In order of their appearance."

HEBREW CALENDAR

PurimMar. 3
Passover (First Day)Apr. 2

The editor's chair,

I don't know how to write the week's "chair." Should I get excited and start condemning, or should I just state the case without adjectives and let you draw your own conclusions. I don't mind telling you, however, that my first reaction was one of surprise, and I think the fact that these celebrations have been held every year changes the situation one bit.

I had thought that there were no longer such animals in the Jewish community as "assimilationists". In fact I usually have been found defending the group most often charged with wanting to lose their Jewish identities against many members of the community who believe exactly that, and whom it seems now probably are right.

Several weeks ago I wrote a mealy-mouthed editorial about how even in Jewish homes where formerly Christmas trees marked the assimilationist now the Chanukah spirit reigns. I never thought that a Jewish organization would be so indifferent to things Jewish as to foster, and be allowed to foster, what is calls in its announcement, "the Christmas spirit".

Here is the announcement. I have nothing more to say:

BROADWAY COUNTRY CLUB

Event No. 2

Christmas Day Tom & Jerry

The Christmas Spirit — Music

At the side of each of these announcements is a small picture of Santa Claus.

Now if the grown-ups of Broadmoor want to observe Christmas that is their privilege, but I think it distinctly unfair to hold a children's Christmas party. I think many other things, but I guess I had better stop right here. And why don't people learn that our non-Jewish friends respect us when we are what we are, and don't want us to observe Christmas unless we believe in and want to commemorate the natal day of Christ.

I wonder if I might suggest that the rabbis of the state arrange to exchange pulpits from time to time. I think this would be a wholesome experiment for various reasons. In the first place it would give the State rabbis a chance to make themselves known

The Question of a New Jewish Flag

A SHORT NOTE in the column by Ben Lewis which is released by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency reveals that the Jewish War Veterans are now canvassing their members on the question of whether to initiate a movement for a "religious flag" representing the Jewish faith apart from the Zionist flag. Such a flag, Mr. Lewis says could be used in Army and Navy chapels in the U. S. A. and wherever Jewish services are held.

The War Vets seem to be heading into needless difficulty. Even if the Zionist members of the J. W. V. do not object to the replacing of a flag which by now has come to mean more than just an emblem of the Jewish effort in Palestine, the reason which prompted the question of a new flag will become invalidated.

Evidently there has been some hesitation to using the present Blue and White flag. That means that the objection is that there is no such things as a Jewish people, that Jews are solely a religious grouping, like Catholics or Methodists. Then if that be true, what is the need for a flag at all. Is there such a thing as a Methodist flag?

But even more germane to the argument is the attitude of the non-Jews. Whatever the flag, whatever its colors or design, will it be known other than the flag of the Jewish people? The J. W. V. will then be back exactly where it is now.

The J. W. V. might decide that no flag at all should be used. But it will take more than this omission to convince the world that there is no such things as a Jewish people.

The Money Quits Coming In, Mr. Pelley Quits

THE EDITORIAL question of The B'nai B'rith Jewish Messenger of Los Angeles, Cal., asking, "What has happened to the Jewish ranters and the American pro-Fascist leaders who for years needled American public opinion with the charge that 'this is a Jewish war'", was answered in an almost hidden announcement in Monday morning's Indianapolis Star.

The announcement read: "Noblesville, Ind.,—The Roll Call, a magazine with anti-Semitic sentiment which has been published in this city a year by William D. Pelley, announced tonight that the publication, due to appear tomorrow, would be suspended for an indefinite period or at least until the war is over."

That answers The Messenger.

The Roll Call is quitting for one reason, and only one. It is no longer bringing in money, not from circulation but from its financial backers.

The fact that many of these financial backers, at least that part that were honestly duped, now see the error of their ways, and know that they were duped, and naturally have withdrawn their support.

Then there are those who contributed financially to Mr. Pelley's ventures knowingly, what I mean is because they deliberately wished to stir up class hatred. These good people have been forced to withdraw their support because they know that investigations by government agencies were surely in the offing, and they dared not risk exposure.

Add to this the fact that support from foreign sources, such as the German and Italian consular officials here, has necessarily withdrawn, and you have the picture with all the colors drawn in.

One other observation. Pelley and others like him, are pretty conclusively proven to be in the business because it was profitable.

Had Pelley been sincere and earnest in his belief that Hitler was the panacea for the ills of the world and this country, had he really and truly believed the drivel he printed about the Jewish menace, he would have hazarded every danger to continue to try to reach the public and to broadcast his message, if even furtively.

The money quits coming in. Mr. Pelley quits.

Current Comment

People Must Want Religion Late Rabbi Edward Israel Said in Beth El Temple (Detroit)

Bulletin.—People seem to want religion. They build and support synagogues. They maintain rabbis in pulpits. In most instances among the great middle class elements of our population—the bulwark of democracy—they send their children to religious school. The boys usually become Bar Mitzvah. Boys and girls together at the proper age, are usually confirmed.

Yes—people seem to want Judaism. They want to maintain it for themselves. They want to preserve it for their children.

Yet they act, for the most part, in an utterly paradoxical manner. The very heart and essence of organized religion is public worship. Few indeed, even under most optimistic conditions, are the members of Reform Jewish congregations who attend public worship with any degree of regularity. Their rabbis are invited to address enormous communal gatherings. When they speak in various communities, crowds pour out to hear them. Yet, in their own synagogues, where it is a matter of the essential life of religion, their own constituency are indifferent to attendance on public worship.

We want our children confirmed in the faith of our fathers. Yet we never feel that we have the duty to give those children evidence of our own interest in, and loyalty to that faith, by going along with them for a brief Friday evening or Sabbath morning worship.

This is no local malady. It is almost universal. Vivid or sensational lecture subjects may momentarily fill the pews—but not with folks who come to pray. And it is on prayer and worship that religion lasts.

Unless we recapture the spirit of Jewish worship and prayer, Judaism is doomed. The world today can ill afford to lose the historic Jewish public worship.

Duty of Larger Congregations in Cities to Provide for Religious Needs of Jews in Small Communities, Rabbi Seliq S. Auerbach of Rome, Ga., Says in the Southern Israelite.—While there are only a few large congregations in Georgia and some congregations of modest size, there are many Jews living in small towns scattered throughout Georgia. It is the fate of these Jews in small towns because of religious isolation, to gradually drift away from Judaism.

For them there is no Kasruth, no religious education for their children and there is practically no chance for attending services except on the High Holidays. This applies even to those who find it convenient to join a congregation in a nearby city (the congregation generally benefits more than the out-of-town member).

So grave has the situation developed that most of these Jews are already so accustomed to the lack of religious facilities that they miss these in individual cases only.

We cannot put all the blame on our brethren in the small towns for this state of affairs. They work all day in their stores and other business establishments and not everyone can be expected to take out the car in the evening to drive say, at least twenty miles or move to a Jewish center and back.

If, therefore, these Jews cannot come to the centers of Jewish life, the centers should come to them.

It is my opinion that the larger congregations should take the initiative and responsibility in providing the small town Jews with the religious facilities they need and to provide these at their home towns.

This, I think, can be done by dividing our state into districts, and then hiring visiting teachers to visit various towns to teach the children, to exercise the Shechita of poultry if requested and to represent Jewry and Judaism to the non-Jews.

see that Elkhart organized and developed one of the finest B'nai B'rith lodges of this district. Besides his work in B'nai B'rith, he was a pillar of the community, and his great influence extended throughout the state.

It was with a sad heart that the writer, after being present at the last meeting which was presided over by Brother Ferman in Elkhart, attended his funeral in Elkhart, where the entire community paid homage and tribute to him.

His inspiration and spirit will continue to guide the new Elkhart lodge to greater success in the realm of B'nai B'rith achievements. The officers and members of the Indiana-Kentucky Association feel deeply his loss.

B'NAI B'RITH PLEDGES AID

Honorable Henry F. Schricker, Governor, State of Indiana, State House, Indianapolis, Indiana

Dear Sir:

At a meeting of the directors and officers of the Indiana-Kentucky State Association of B'nai B'rith, I was instructed, as President of this organization, to convey to you the true sentiments of the members and officers of the various B'nai B'rith Lodges of the State Association, that you can count on all out cooperation and assistance in any form whatsoever that you may, from time to time, see fit to request, during this national emergency.

The men and women of B'nai B'rith are anxious to do their part, and will deem it a privilege to respond to any request.

Yours very respectfully,
Seymour Weisberger, Pres.
Indiana-Kentucky State Assn.
B'nai B'rith.

to more congregations, and conversely would give the congregations an opportunity to hear rabbis from neighboring communities. I think the rabbis would like this just as much as the congregations, and all it needs is for a few of the rabbis to write me saying they approve, and I'll try to arrange to get the system started so that eventually practically every rabbi in Indiana will have had an opportunity to conduct a service in practically every community in the State. You know I find it so very exhilarating and stimulating to be able to know so many people throughout Indiana, and I am sure our rabbis would welcome the same opportunity to learn to know more people.

I believe I once told you about the error I made when I worked on a daily newspaper, which resulted in a $75,000 suit. Two constables were on trial for bribery and the one who won acquittal I had convicted, while the one who actually was found guilty, I had as having been exonerated. Wow! My middle initial stands for muddling. Who was that guy that ran the wrong way in the football game? Anyway last week I wrote here about Emanuel Feuermann, as organizer of The Palestine Orchestra, when it actually was Bronislaw Huberman.
